Downing-Street, Auguſt 6, 1796.

A DISPATCH, of which the following is a Copy, has been received from Colonel Craufurd by the Right Honorable Lord Grenville, His Majeſty's Principal Secretary of State for the Foreign Department, dated Head Quarters of His Royal Highneſs the Archduke Charles of Auſtria, Felbach, near Stutgard, July 19, 1796.

MY LORD,

I HAVE the Honor to inform your Lordſhip, that the Archduke, upon receiving Intelligence that the Enemy were marching towards Stutgard, with a View to cut off His Royal Highneſs's direct Communication with General Frolich and the Prince of Condé, moved from his Camp near Pfortzheim, on the 14th Inſtant, to Vahingen, upon the River Entz, where he remained the 15th and 16th. On the 17th, as the Enemy continued their March towards Stutgard, His Royal Highneſs moved to Schwebertingen, and on the 18th to Ludwigſberg, having detached Two ſmall Corps to occupy the Bridges over the Neckar at Canſtadt, Unter Turhnen, and Eſſlingen, in order to cover his Left Flank, and ſecure the great Road from Stutgard to Ulm, by which lays his Communication with his principal Magazines.

In the Afternoon of the 18th the Enemy arrived at Stutgard, and attempted to diſlodge the Auſtrian advanced Poſts, which were placed in ſuch a Manner as to command the Roads leading from that City to Ludwigſberg and Canſtadt.

The Attack commenced about Four o'Clock, and was directed with much Violence againſt Two diſtinct Corps; that on the Left, poſted near Canſtadt, under the Command of General Baillet, and that on the Right, between Canſtadt and Feyerbach, under the Prince John of Lichtenſtein. On the Heights of Canſtadt the Enemy were repulſed Three Times, but they ſucceeded in making themſelves Maſters of the commanding Ground on the Prince of Lichtenſtein's Right Flank, as he had not Troops enough to occupy it in ſufficient Force.

However, His Highneſs determined to wait till the laſt Moment for the Arrival of General Devay, who was marching to his Support with another Diviſion of the Troops that formed the advanced Poſts of the Army. In the mean Time the Enemy gained ſo much Ground, that even their Muſquetry Fire along the Front and on the Right Flank croſſed in the Prince of Lichtenſtein's Ranks, and it was with the greateſt Difficulty he could keep them from falling upon his Rear. At this critical Moment General Devay appeared, and defeated that Part of the Enemy's Troops who were in Poſſeſſion of the Heights on the Prince of Lichtenſtein's Right. This gave His Highneſs an Opportunity of attacking in Front, which he did with a Degree of Succeſs that fully rewarded the exemplary Firmneſs diſplayed by himſelf and his ſmall Corps during the whole Affair; and General Baillet having maintained his Ground on the Left, notwithſtanding the repeated Efforts made to diſlodge him; the Action terminated, towards Nine o'Clock at Night, in Favour of the Auſtrians.

Their Loſs amounted to about 900 Men; that of the Enemy was certainly much greater.

On the 19th His Royal Highneſs croſſed the Neckar, and encamped at Felbach, for the Purpoſe of covering more effectually his Communication with Ulm.

The Contingent Troops of the Circle of Suabia having quitted the Poſition of Sultz, on the Neckar, and retired behind Keckingen, the Prince of Condé and General Frolich, who had united at Villingen, and were ſtill there on the 17th, will by this Time have been obliged moſt probably to fall back.

General Wartenſleben withdrew the Garriſon of Francfort on the 14th Inſtant, as that Place is not capable of Defence; and he arranged with General Jourdan a partial Armiſtice for Two Days, to give Time for carrying off what ſtill remained there belonging to the Auſtrians. On the 16th, finding that the Enemy were detaching round his Right, through the Biſhoprick of Fulda, his Excellency continued his Retreat towards Wurtzburg, in the Neighbourhood of which Place he was with his whole Force when the laſt Accounts came from him: So that Wurtzburg upon the Mein, Canſtadt and Eſſlingen on the Neckar, and Sigmaringen on the Danube, may be conſidered at this Moment as nearly the principal Points of the Auſtrian Poſition.

I have the Honor to be, &c.
